

Constructive Intercultural Management

Integrating Cultural Differences Successfully: Second Edition

2nd edition

Christoph Barmeyer, Chair of Intercultural Communication, University of Passau, Germany, Madeleine Bausch, Faculty of Economics and Business, University of Chile, Chile and Ulrike Mayrhofer, IAE Nice, Université Côte d'Azur, France

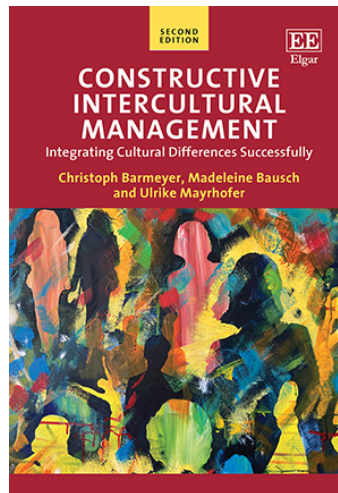

This second edition of an engaging textbook offers a novel approach to the question of how organizations can navigate cultural differences constructively. It helps individuals, teams and organizations understand, experience and manage interculturality effectively. This constructive perspective incorporates cutting-edge empirical and theoretical research to address new challenges in the field, including digitalization, artificial intelligence, sustainability, geopolitical polarization and migration. This innovative textbook presents relevant, current approaches, making it an invaluable resource for scholars and students of management studies as well as for business consultants, managers and practitioners.

'In this book, Barmeyer, Bausch, and Mayrhofer provide insights into concepts related to intercultural and cross-cultural management. They draw upon leading and prominent research, explaining key concepts and findings in an understandable fashion, and illustrate these with a plethora of real-world examples. They also provide practical solutions, suggesting how individual, organizational, and societal level factors can develop constructive interculturality. This research-grounded and practical-oriented book may help students, practitioners, and organizations adapt, learn, and thrive in intercultural contexts.'

– Davina Vora, SUNY New Paltz, USA

'Cultural diversity is not a problem; it is a huge advantage to companies, organizations, and countries that know best how to leverage the advantages of cultural synergy. This book expertly guides readers on how to benefit from diversity, drawing equally on changes in perspective, attitude, and behavior. The benefits flow not only to individuals and organizations, but to society as a whole.'

– Nancy J. Adler, McGill University, Canada
